"Wellness is a lifelong process of assuming personal responsibility that empowers the individual to exercise choice, make informed decisions and take action towards a more balanced, dynamically sustainable and fulfilling existence in all dimensions of life"

Dr. Paul Noone

Dr Noone completed his under-graduate chiropractic training at Philip Institute in 1983. Has practiced in Ireland, completed his PhD at the University of Exter and his DACNB under tutelage of Ted Carrick. Dr Noone conducts a chiropractic neurology referral practice in Hampton East, consulting with many health care practitioners and their patients.

Keeping the Ageing Brain Young

Our population is ageing. Our aging community members are living more active lives than ever before, and have high expectations of their minds and bodies. They are self funded, self directed, internet savvy, are "tapped into" internet-based information resources and are demanding that all health practitioners help them to improve and maintain a high quality of life.

Many of the "new-aged" are rejecting their GP's recommendation as "gospel", they are eschewing the elective use of pharmaceutical medicines and are opting for natural alternatives. Studies have revealed that more and more older members of our community are utilising chiropractic services, as they view it as natural and empowering. Our older patients continually report favourable responses to chiropractic care with many getting the "big idea" of ongoing maintenance care.

Dr Noone will explore the nervous system and explain the impact of age on neurological function. He will demonstrate why chiropractic care is an appropriate fit in the health management plans of our older community members. He will identify pointers in the history and examination of an older patient, and provide practical tips in the treatment and rehabilitation of older patients. He will also report on the results of a recent ASRF funded study examining the Falls Risk Profile of Chiropractic patients over 65.
